

I am shocked that the FCC allows Sinclair Broadcasting to force all their local stations to put on a one hour fake documentary against John Kerry just before the presidential election. Perhaps the FCC could not stop this process, but the FCC does have an obligation to look into this kind of propagandist use of public airwaves. And this is a clear example of the problem of allowing a few big corporations to control so many stations.

Sinclair should be forced by the FCC to serve the public rather than their own propaganda wishes since they use public airwaves free of charge. I believe this is not a democratic process. I want to see more real news not fake stories produced by some group with a grudge.

One has to wonder how Sinclair got such power and so many stations. I think this company illustrates why we need to strengthen media ownership rules. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard.
